CMF

When did the chicken mull begin? Most people agree that it began sometime between 1972-1975. The photo is marked 1975.

Homer Hansford came up with the idea for the church to make chicken mull. At first, it was just several pots (maybe 8) for church members and their friends. So many people liked the mull that it developed into a fundraiser for the CMF. Homer also shared the mull idea with other churches that needed to raise funds.

Albert Smith and Ed Harris were the first wood choppers. Later, Leo Baker, Bob Bargfrede, and Russell Lee would cut the wood from Leo's trailer park and then chop it at the church.

Woodson Montgomery would purchase the chicken for the men. They used whole chickens for most of the years and then changed to breasts and thighs to cut down on waste.

The men borrowed pots from everyone they could until they started buying their own. Leo provided the barrels to be used as firepits for the pots to sit on.

The ladies always helped by picking off the chicken before it was ground and added to the pots of broth along with ground onions and ground crackers, along with the special spice blend (don't ask what it is—it's a secret).

During the early years, the men would finish the clean-up by having a bonfire to burn all the chicken boxes and scraps. The men would also enjoy Fred Foster's tea. They never left before making sure the parking lot was cleaned up for church the next day.

Dirt Digging, Design, and Reflection

by Nancy Watkins

Life does evolve. Often whatever magically pulls us to, or pushes us away from something, evolves over time. Usually, it just doesn't happen or suddenly appear.

My passion for gardening did just that. It started many decades ago. I was 5ish, living with my Granddaddy. He joyfully tilled the soil. He planted tomatoes, corn, green beans, roses, petunias, and zinnias, which he called Old Maids. I came to think of myself as helping. I would plant petunias in the holes he dug for the tomatoes. I planted roadside weeds where the corn was to be put and on and on and on. At times I would gather hands full of pink rose petals from his prized rose, tossed them in the air to make pink snow. My Granddaddy never scolded me. I am not sure if he wanted me to love planting or if, in his heart, he just saw all those blonde curls, chubby knees and big brown eyes.

As time progressed, I continued seeing the beauty of a planned garden. I saw color, smelled heavenly aromas, and found unusual plants. Then one day, just after my husband and I bought our very first home, a neighbor came by to invite me for coffee and banana bread in her garden. I soon realized the beauty of the garden was the calling card, while the garden's message was one of pausing, being in the moment and purging oneself of concerns of the day.

Mabel became a gardening mentor for me. She was an old-fashioned gardener who had forgotten more than I will ever know about it. Little did she know that through her knowledge and joy of gardening, she encouraged me to explore design.

I learned the elements, the dos and the don'ts of gardening. Lawsy yes, one must keep in mind repetition, pathways should be 4 feet wide, fences, function, texture, and a gazillion other musts. Yes, I learned all that, however each time I settle down to the drafting table, it is Mabel's Garden that is my point of reference. Before the first line is drawn, I think of how to create a place for joy, calmness, and solitude as well as a place for prayer and healing.

Now the day has come. The plan is complete. The plants are on site, the workers are eager to dig, a cooler with Gatorade and water are nearby. I stand aside to allow it to happen. I am in awe of Nature's paint brush that brings into reality what only I have been able to see.

When the day ends, I begin moving empty pots, coolers, and dirty gloves back to the truck. It is then that I look to the Heavens and say, 'What'cha think about that Granddaddy'? After my words to Granddaddy, I then give the plants one last bit of Mabel's very special, very potent verbal fertilizer. I turn to say, 'Grow, dxxx you, Grow'! It worked for Mabel, so why not me. Then and only then do I head home reflecting on another day of soul searching, joy and gratitude. I have been blessed.

My garden blessing began when I was 5 and continues to evolve with each time I step out my door. I check out Granddaddy's rose, his boxwood, Mabel's hydrangeas, my girl scout leader's Lady Banks rose and my Aunt LaVera's forsythia. Although, the gardeners are all gone now, they are still there to soothe an aching heart or to share the joy of the day.

I have come to realize some blessings have thorns while others wrap you in wonderful aromas, sweetness and beauty that can only come from a garden.
